Major veterans' groups voice concern over Senate health bill

WASHINGTON — Major veterans' groups, including the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, are concerned about the Senate health care bill, which they say would provide inadequate health care for veterans.

The American Legion sent a letter to Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, Democrat of Nevada, expressing concern about the bill's provisions for veterans. The letter said the bill would not provide adequate health care for veterans and urged the Senate to consider amendments that would improve the bill.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars also sent a letter to Reid expressing concern about the bill's provisions for veterans. The letter said the bill would not provide adequate health care for veterans and urged the Senate to consider amendments that would improve the bill.

Veterans' groups have been warning for months that the Senate health care bill would not provide adequate health care for veterans. The American Legion has been particularly vocal in its opposition to the bill, saying it would not provide adequate health care for veterans.

The Senate is expected to vote on the bill later this month. The bill is expected to pass the Senate with a majority of Democrats and a handful of Republicans voting yes. The Republican-led House has already passed a similar bill.

The Senate bill includes several provisions that are of concern to veterans' groups. One provision would cut funding for veterans' health care programs by $3 billion over 10 years. Another provision would limit the ability of veterans to obtain care from the Department of Veterans Affairs.

Veterans' groups are concerned that these provisions would undermine the ability of veterans to obtain care from the Department of Veterans Affairs. They say the bill would make it more difficult for veterans to obtain care from the Department of Veterans Affairs and would cut funding for veterans' health care programs.

Veterans' groups are also concerned about the bill's provisions for non-veterans. The bill includes several provisions that would cut funding for non-veterans' health care programs. The American Legion says the bill would cut funding for non-veterans' health care programs by $3 billion over 10 years.

The American Legion has been particularly vocal in its opposition to the bill's provisions for non-veterans. The American Legion says the bill would cut funding for non-veterans' health care programs and would undermine the ability of non-veterans to obtain care from the Department of Health and Human Services.

In the U.S., some retired military personnel are losing their insurance. It joins a Democratic-leaning group, VoteVets, in opposing the bill. VoteVets launched a six-figure ad campaign.

"What will become of these veterans as they face higher insurance costs?" Carl Blake, associate executive director of Paralyzed Veterans, wrote in a letter.
