State Forest Programs and Timber Management on State Lands

The Illinois Department of Natural Resources has throughout the Division of Forestry's history has protected, managed and tended to the states forest resources on both private and public lands. The creation of the State Forests Act (525 ILCS 40/) guides and assures the current Division of Forest Resources leadership and staff on seven state forests totaling 22,000 acres. State Forests total 22,000 acres and total 8 % of State owned lands or one-half of 1% of the total forests in Illinois.

Critical, overdue canopy management for forest health, watershed health and regeneration of oak has begun on some of the state's seven forests since 2012 after over 30 years without being allowed despite the State Forests Act. At a future date a fully-active, annual harvest program on each forest likely affects 1% of State Forest acreage per year – or 1/200th of 1% of total forestland in Illinois. Though that is not enough stewardship to dent Illinois' total forestland; the demonstrations and management are important to showcase forest management practices and results.

Pennsylvania state forests quoted (by Olivia Goudy ogoudy@heraldstandard.com):

There's a science behind the long-term health and sustainability of the 2.2 million acres of Pennsylvania state forest. "We have regeneration models throughout the state. Within the model, you can see every stand," said Russ Gibbs, a service forester with the PA Department of Conservation and Natural Resources' Bureau of Forestry.

In terms of forest management, a "stand" refers to an area of trees similar in structure, size and species. "In order to balance age class distribution — you don't want old growth throughout, but instead want a mixture of age classes in each timber type — there are planning periods every year," Gibbs said. Management foresters get an acreage-amount-per-stand type of what needs harvested the following year to two years. That way, Gibbs said, they're ahead of the game. For instance, if the model calls for so many acres of an oak — one of the most common stands along with hardwood — harvest, foresters have time to do a survey of the stand and install plots that will determine how hard or light to cut it and what action to take.

State Forests Act, Sections 1 and 2:
The Department of Natural Resources shall have control, supervision and management of all State forests herein provided for and hereafter to be established.

State forests shall include only such lands as are decided by the Department of Natural Resources to be more valuable for the growing of forests than for other purposes, and shall have for their purpose the production of forest products, the protection of watersheds that are subject to serious erosion, the maintenance of purity of springs and streams and to afford recreation places for the people of the State.

Most states across our nation have an active state forest system that helps fund forest management or their forestry departments and forestry priorities. October 13th news article about

Policy Statements:

Illinois forests and woodlands are critical to the citizens of Illinois and globally far beyond the singular value of wood and fiber production. The Division of Forest Resources integrates and requires on state land and cooperating private lands that important other concerns of soil, water, wildlife, habitats, recreation, aesthetics and cultural resources are addressed while growing, harvesting and regenerating forests. We advocate and outreach forest management principles to all Illinois forest owners.

Demands on Illinois forest resource for all goods and services the forest can provide continue to increase while nearly 90% of Illinois forests remain privately owned. To conserve, enhance and expand the benefits and critical function of Illinois forests it is necessary that forest landowners, government agencies, forest industry and citizens at large work together.

Equal opportunity to participate in programs of the Illinois Department of Natural Resources and those funded by the U.S. D.A. and other agencies is available to every individual regardless of race, sex, national origin, disability, age, religion, or other non-merit factors.
